ORIGEN BIOMEDICAL FEATURED IN AUSTIN BUSINESS JOURNAL PROFILE HIGHLIGHTING EXPANSION AND STRATEGIC GROWTH

AUSTIN, 20 APRIL 2026: OriGen Biomedical, a leading provider of cryopreservation and cell culture products, today announced that President and CEO Beth San Segundo has been featured in the Austin Business Journal in a profile by staff writer Cody Baird. The article highlights OriGen's upcoming headquarters relocation and significant expansion in Austin, as well as the company's continued growth in the advanced therapy space.

The article spotlights OriGen's evolution as an Austin-based medical device manufacturer and its role in supporting the rapidly advancing field of cell and gene therapy. It also highlights the company's investment in a new headquarters and expanded manufacturing capabilities, positioning OriGen for continued scale and innovation.

Founded in 1997, OriGen Biomedical develops single-use technologies used in the collection, storage, processing, and cryopreservation of cellular material for advanced therapies. The company's focus on user-informed design and close collaboration with clinicians and laboratories has helped establish it as a trusted partner in the life sciences industry.

"It's an exciting time for OriGen as we continue to grow in Austin and expand our capabilities," said Beth San Segundo, President and CEO of
